Editorial: Change is Good
by Dr. AnnMaria DeMars

Perhaps we have just reached the tipping point where judo is becoming more of a community, more focused on the players and coaches. There have been a lot of positive changes surrounding judo lately, and I want to echo Jim Pedro, Sr.’s coaching column this month. Change can be good and we are seeing a lot of it. It isn’t one incident or person; it is a lot of them. For example:

- From Mississippi to Alaska, more people who have always been involved with their own clubs are opening their arms even wider and working with a whole region, nation or even internationally. The Great American Workout, pictured on the cover and throughout this issue was hosted by Serge Bouyssou in Rhode Island and featured clinicians from New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut and California. The turnout was terrific. This two-day event was offered at a discount rate thanks to support from the USJA and USJF. Serge is in Louisiana doing a clinic this weekend with James Wall and Jeff Miller.

- The Judo Forum Summit in Carlsbad, CA this month was organized by Paul Nogaki, founder of a strong USJA club and a rokudan in the USJA, along with Bill Caldwell of San Shi Dojo, the largest club in California Judo, Inc. and is hosting athletes from Australia to the east coast of the United States. Funding is being provided for athlete scholarships from the USJA (thanks to a wonderful anonymous donation of $2,000), from the USJF and California Judo, Inc.

- Judo is back in the Mississippi State Games thanks to the pioneering efforts of Keith Worshaim.

- Tony Comfort, a coach at the USJA/USJF West Coast Training Center, former elite competitor and engineer is flying to Mississippi supported by USJA development funds to help grow our southern members who are growing judo.

- USJA State Award winners can attend the junior national training camp with Jimmy Pedro, Jr. following the junior nationals in Boston at no cost. Campers have the option of attending the Mayo Quanchi camp on Thursday at no additional cost. A coach’s clinic will be held at this camp with Jim Pedro, Sr. assisted by Ronda Rousey.

- Gary Goltz, USJA COO will be doing a clinic in Sitka, Alaska on activities for club development, player recruitment and retention.

- The long time events continue as well, Roy Hash’s camp in Texas, the camp in the Carolinas, the YMCA camp in New York, Camp Bushido West in northern California.

While many American organizations have experienced a decline in volunteerism and donations, we are seeing an upswing in the USJA. Be a part of it. Volunteer. Teach. Referee. Donate. Participate. All of our camps and clinics are open to everyone, and we are finding more and more people opening up to us. It’s a good time.
On a personal note – if you are at the USJA Junior Nationals in Boston this month look me up and say, “Hi”. It’s always nice to be able to put a face with a voice on the phone or email address. Come to the board meeting on June 28. It’s open to everyone.

Coaches Corner: Attitude is Everything and Change Can Be Good
by Jim Pedro, Sr., USJA Coaching Chair

From when I first started to go around and do clinics, I feel that we have come a long way. I see more and more coaches are attending but the biggest change, a positive one, is in attitude. More and more coaches are willing to try new techniques and learn.

The biggest problem I had seen at clinics in the past was that most coaches wouldn’t attempt to do the techniques, often standing with folded arms and judgmental air. Because of that attitude they were not able to bring the knowledge back to their students. The clinic at the Great American Workout in Rhode Island last month was an example of this new attitude and willingness to try new things. It was co-sponsored by both USJA and USJF, and many coaches of all ages came to learn.

Not only did their willingness to try new techniques benefit them but it was also an excellent example for the several young coach candidates, under age 21, who came to be certified. Seeing older coaches on the mat trying the new techniques, learning from other coaches, gave our up and coming coaches the right example and the right attitude. I could also see that it made them more comfortable, realizing that no one expected them to know everything.

The only real way to learn a new technique is to attempt to do it and learn by trial and error. I personally have always asked players and coaches to show me a new technique that I have seen so that I can learn it. If you aren’t willing to learn new techniques and new things then you become stagnant and can’t grow. Don’t be embarrassed to ask somebody to show you and personally try the technique. Then, you’ll have a better chance to remember the technique and what it was that made you want to add it to your repertoire in the first place. And remember, the technique that someone is showing you was taught to them by someone else. And the cycle keeps on going on.
A coach can influence the life of anyone who trains with him, whether it is a young child or an adult. We will discuss some of the ways a coach can be a positive influence in other people’s lives, but the two primary tasks that a coach has are the following:

1- Raise expectations.
2- Create opportunities.

When we really get down to it, a coach’s job is to help people raise their own expectations of themselves and to create opportunities. If you, as a coach and role model, expect a certain level of behavior or a certain level of expertise or skill, more often than not, your athletes or students will do everything they can to meet that level you expect and try to exceed it. If they don’t, then talk to them, coach them, be honest with them, and get them to want to raise their expectations and then do it.

The key here is to make sure the expectations you want them to meet are reasonable and something attainable. Also, you, as a coach, can create opportunities for your athletes and students. If you’re a coach of a junior judo team, do your homework and find local and regional judo tournaments where your kids can compete. Talk to other coaches and arrange for clinics so that your team can be exposed to different skills and approaches to training. If you have an athlete who is really outstanding, talk to your judo organization about getting this kid to a national training center for more advanced training.
Not only can you help with training and competitive opportunities, you can talk to other people in your community about educational or job opportunities for your athletes and students. As a coach, you wield influence. Use it to your team’s advantage.

Specifically, raising expectations means that the coach himself sets standards that his athletes or students must meet. An “expectation” is a standard way of behaving or pattern of living. To some degree, you could call them “goals” but that defines the concept too narrowly. Goals are specific usually. Raising expectations is more general in terms, but a definite pattern of behavior that leads to positive lifestyle choices. Part of the students’ daily training is to meet and exceed the expectations (or goals) that the coach has established. I’m not always talking about how many miles somebody has to run or how many throws must be performed each practice. Coaches should establish a specific pattern of behavior and expect his athletes to act within the limits of that behavior. A good example is not allowing athletes to show up late to practice without being expected to pay the price for it. If a young man or woman shows up late, he or she knows there will be a price to pay. The coach sets the punishment to every behavior according to its importance to him.

Discipline really isn’t a natural thing to most people and one of the ways of raising expectations in others is to teach them to be disciplined. This eventually leads to self-discipline and when a young person becomes self-disciplined, it means (to the coach) years of training have paid off. Eventually, the athlete or student will not only attempt to meet the expectations of his coach, he will set his own. When your athletes have gone beyond only trying to meet the expectations you set for them and begin to expect more of themselves, then you, as a coach, have successfully accomplished a major task in the positive development of this person’s life.

Sometimes, creating opportunities means that you have to create events or activities that will help develop your athletes. Opportunity is like riding in a car. If you know where you’re going, you’ll usually get there. If you see (or create) an opportunity and know how to take advantage of it, you’ll achieve your goals.

You, as the coach, are an important person in setting levels of expectation for your students, so you should be actively trying to create more opportunities for them. Even if these opportunities have nothing specifically to do with winning judo or sport jujitsu matches, they are still very real in the lives of everyone concerned. An example that quickly comes to mind is how many times I have talked with prospective employers when my athletes have used me as a job reference. Literally hundreds of young people have asked me to be a job reference and I have always complied. In other cases, athletes needed direction in their education and opportunities were found in getting them their high school equivalency. This has nothing to do with winning judo matches, but as a coach, I was able to help in creating opportunities for their education.

Sometimes, it only takes giving a young person a chance to prove himself. A coach doesn’t have to “pull strings” or “know somebody’ to create opportunities for his athletes. Just giving a young person a chance to prove himself is often the break that will impel this athlete to go on to bigger and better things. A coach creates an opportunity for an athlete every time he prepares him well on the mat and sets him in a positive direction off the mat.
Coaches should keep in mind that just because you have created the opportunity, it doesn’t mean that the athlete will take advantage of it. An old saying that has a lot of truth in it is; “You can lead a horse to water, but he has to drink it for himself.” Don’t be too disappointed when somebody doesn’t step through the door you opened. Hopefully, your athlete’s expectations of himself will prompt him to take advantage of positive opportunities, but if he doesn’t, he simply doesn’t. Don’t give up on him, but don’t be too disappointed either.

You Don’t Have to be a Saint, But…

One other thing is important and should be mentioned. If you plan on coaching, then you had better lead a life above reproach. Kids, and adults too for that matter, look up to their coaches. You, as the coach, set the example and that example should be a good one. You don’t have to be a saint, but you better be a decent human being if you want to be a good coach. Whether you like it or not, you are a public figure when you are a coach. What you say and what you do will be remembered for a long time, even a lifetime, by your athletes.

NEW DOJO FORMED IN OHIO

by Herb Mowery

This a great day in martial arts world as OHIO MARTIAL ARTS CENTER, of Sciotoville, Ohio now has a new home. In the coming weeks we will have lots of work to do to get this dream to come true. I look forward to see as many of you as possible in helping move mats and all our things out of storage and into new. Our dojo will be a work in progress as we hope to have great things come from this school.
Grass Roots Clinic

Dr. Zbigniew Piec, former international competitor from Poland, gave a Grass Roots Clinic sponsored by the USJA at Goltz Judo Club on May 17. According to “Dr. Zbig”, if the fundamentals of judo are learned correctly, its many techniques can be applied easily. The clinic was free to USJA members as one of the many benefits of membership. Over 40 judo students from age six through adult were present to hone their basic skills, have a good time and meet fellow judo enthusiasts from clubs around the nation.

Editor’s note: The story goes... a woman came for an interview as a preschool teacher. She brought along her daughter, who the interviewer knew as an honor student, captain of the swim team and member of the church choir. When the director asked if she had any experience, the woman pointed to her daughter and said, “Here is an example of some of my work.” She got the job.

A DOZEN REASONS TO GO TO USJA JUNIOR NATIONALS IN BOSTON
by Julia De Mars, Age 10

1. Room service (after weigh-ins I am getting a piece of chocolate cake as big as my head)
2. You get to stay in a fancy hotel
3. My friends will be there!!!
5. My sisters and my niece are there!
6. There is a camp after the tournament with my sister, Ronda, and that guy that coaches her, Jimmy Pedro, Jr. and that other grandpa guy that coaches her, Jim, Sr. They’re funny and they tell you judo stuff that really works. Ronda is my favorite. Grandpa Jim is funny, too. Just don’t let him know that whenever he is looking for who poked him and ran away or who hid his bottle of water that it was Ronda. (Okay, well maybe sometimes it is me. But only a few times. Mostly it is Ronda.)
7. Last year at camp after the junior nationals I ate about two dozen pieces of pizza AND I got a t-shirt AND met some kids from Alaska.
8. I bet the fireworks in Boston on fourth of July are really cool.
9. I heard they have boats shaped like swans you can ride around in. We didn’t get to go on them last time we were in Boston so somebody better take me this time.
10. I’ll make new friends and I’ll get to see the people I met in Rhode Island again.
11. I read about the Boston Harbor and Boston Tea Party in school and now I can see where it happened. Maybe I can get extra credit for writing about it next year in case I forget to do my homework one day. I’m not saying I will forget my homework, I’m just planning ahead.
12. Mom is going to drag me to educational stuff whether I want to go or not. It could be cool, you never know.

[Editor’s note: THE CAMP AFTER USJA JUNIOR NATIONALS IS FREE TO THE USJA STATE AWARD WINNERS.]

PAN-AMERICAN KATA CHAMPIONS – WOW!

There is just no other word for it. Long time USJA supporters Jeff Giunta and Heiko Rommelman swept all three men’s divisions in kata at the Pan-American championships, winning the nage no kata, katame no kata and ju no kata gold medals. As gifted as instructors as they are competitors, two of their students, Kirsten Weisbeck and Kerry Forster, won silver medals in the women’s nage no kata and gold in the women’s katame no kata. The gold medal in ju no kata was won by none other than our own USJA Board Member Michelle Holtze and her partner Kathy Buys. (No, they are not students of Jeff and Heiko!)

Congratulations on a fabulous job representing the USA.

How can I become more involved with the USJA?

Want to be part of developing our future, like the young athletes shown above? We always need volunteers! It can be something as small as sending in photos for Growing Judo, writing an article or helping at a clinic. Help at the USJA Junior Nationals with scorekeeping, timing or refereeing. Any money donated goes 100% to support growing judo. USJA Development funds are only used for development including lots of camp scholarships and clinics throughout the country.

Operators are standing by (okay, I made that up, we are open during regular business hours, Mountain Time, but call Katrina (877) 411-3409. We even take credit cards.) If something is near and dear to your heart, say, camp scholarships for kids 10 and under, you can make a directed donation for that purpose.

As many of you know, Southside Dojo has hosted the All Women’s Championship in Kalamazoo, Michigan for the last 3 years. This year’s event is Nov. 7-9, 2008. It has been a very exciting time for the females of our sport. It was long overdue and much needed.

Last year I received an e-mail for Mr. Roy Hash of Texoma Judo in Texas asking if I would mind if they held an all female event there and, would I be interested in coming down to help. My reply “is that really a question?”

So, it was set for a second all female event in the US May 24, 2008. The Terry Kelly Female Invitational Judo Tournament

I flew into Texas, Wichita to be exact at 3pm Friday the 23rd of May. Roy and Julee Cope of Ohio picked me up at the airport which was Sheppard Air Force Base in Wichita. You land on the Military airstrip and arrive at a small terminal through a gate at the end of the runway.

We went to Roy’s home and I changed and we then headed out to pick up some mats Roy had in storage that were to compliment the mat area at the venue. We loaded 2 mini vans and headed to Bill Bartley Branch, Family YMCA to off load and meet the rest of the set up crew.

There were so many volunteers that Julee and I excused ourselves to take in the 90º F Texas dry heat. It really was a treat to the both of us as we are use to 50º F or below at this time of year. Mary Anderson, our home host for the weekend dropped Julee and I off at a Restaurant for some supper while the rest of the mats were laid.

Oh so early Saturday (6am), we awoke, had our coffee and muffins and headed to the venue.

As the registrations came in Julee and I worked at creating the pools. We were joined by Rita Law of Becerra Judo. She was indispensable on the computer as I am a 2 finger typist. Donna Janekca joined in and kept the pools posted to the wall and supplied the tables with the sheets.

Mid way through the bracket making Julee was up for her first match. Of course I missed being mat side as coach but hey, she did what she always does and played Judo. She would come back between her matches and put another set together. Yes I was able to be mat side for some of her matches. Terry though was there for her through most. Thank you Terry!

So our day went.
Rita who is 40 something and Sandan, and myself, who is 50 something and Sandan toyed through the day with competing against each other. We were so engrossed in the bracketing that we both agreed that we would wait until the pools were set and see if we had the energy to suit up and play. Well I can tell all, we took a look at each other near the end of the competition and said “oh yeah!” It was so good to be on the mat in the capacity of competitor again. Refereeing is great, Pooling is hard, fun and exhausting but, I think competing is the best.

I would like to thank the coaches, parents and referees for their patience and support for this event.

Special thanks to the 68 competitors who made this event a reality. They came to get as many matches as we could fit together. That is what it is about isn’t it? It was great.

Thanks to those 5 Referee that came and spent their holiday supporting this event.

Thanks and congratulations to Reuben Martin Jr. for passing his Regional Referee and being on the mat the full competition.

Thanks to USJA Development Chair AnnMaria DeMars and Joshi Judo, Frances Glaze, Jana Deauber and Eiko Shepherd for their support of me to attend this tournament.

Thank you to Roy Hash and Terry Kelly for their insight and support of the Women of Judo.

The last thing I would like to say in this article is, my friend and mentor Brett Wood-Taylor passed away and went to Judoka heaven. He was celebrated by friends on this May 24th date. I know in my heart he would have wanted me to carry on with my plans. He knows, he will forever be in my heart.
