My trip to Japan by Gerry Lafon

Many of us with friends and relatives in Japan have been glued to the TV these past weeks wondering how they are doing after the devastating earthquake and tsunami. Three months ago, I was in the northern part of Japan, specifically in Kuji, whose port was hit hard, and in Yamagata City, just forty miles from Sendai which was wiped out by the tsunami. Fortunately, all my friends and my wife’s relatives are safe.

Kuji is home to the Mifune Judan Memorial Museum and Judo club. I visited Mifune Judan with a former student of mine, Dr. Hiroshi Takei. He is now head coach of Yamagata University Medical School Judo Club. It was a wonderful visit that apparently not too many “gaijin” or foreigners make. When we arrived at the dojo, kids were running up and down the stairs pointing and staring at the gaijin -- me!

After watching the session for a good amount of time, Dr. Takei and I decided we wanted to practice randori with the kids. We asked Hisamatsu sensei for permission to join the class. With permission granted, we climbed into our gi and got on the mat. More stares, more curiosity: I was in my blue gi!

All the kids I randoried with had great fighting spirit, which I welcomed; my own students often lack this spirit. After practice and all the formalities, I was mobbed by a bunch of curious kids. They were definitely interested in that blue gi of mine. They wanted to touch it and rub up against it. A group of playful students dragged me into a cross-cultural game of rock-paper-scissors. Lots of smiles, laughter, happiness . . . priceless.

The following morning we were greeted by Hisamatsu Sensei as we arrived to tour the Mifune Judan Museum. He arranged free entrance for our group. From my perspective, the highlight of the museum was two pictures of Mifune. Most people know that Mifune was extremely small, even for a Japanese. What most don’t know is that within his small frame was the musculature of a body builder. Three video clips, each around six minutes long, were also well worth the trip.

Upon our return to Yamagata City, it was time to practice with Dr. Takei’s club members, which includes kids and university players. On the second day, I was asked to lead the final hour of training. From past experience working with Japanese players, I know they are very curious about alternative methods of training and European-style Judo, and excited about the change of pace from their traditional practices. The Yamagata students were no different.

Since Japanese Judo revolves around the big “ippon,” transitions tend to be ignored. So for one hour that’s what we worked on. The logic of this type of training was readily apparent and accepted by the players. At the beginning of practice, they were curious as to why a gaijin was teaching them Judo, but after, many of them were declaring their desire to come to San Diego to train with me. Again, priceless.
Thankfully, the Mifune Judan Judo Club and the Yamagata Judo Club survived the disaster. Watching TV Japan, I’ve noticed that many evacuated people are being housed on the green and red tatami of local Judo clubs. Sadly, many lives have been lost, and no doubt many Judo clubs have ceased to exist. I hope you will join me in contributing to the ongoing relief efforts.

--Gerry Lafon

The sweet, friendly faces of these Japanese children are a stark contrast to recent events. How their lives have changed! Even though, as Gerry Lafon reports, their families and towns have withstood the immediate threats of earthquake and tsunami, the danger of nuclear accidents looms large and still threatens their well-being.

Please remember them in your thoughts and prayers, and consider contributing to an organization of your choice. For your convenience, the USJA homepage, www.usja-judo.org, has a link to the American Red Cross' Japan Earthquake Fund.

Garage Judo

I believe that each community in America could support a Judo club if only we had enough coaches. Since we don’t have enough coaches maybe we should take a page from the American Youth Soccer Association (AYSO) when it set up shop almost fifty years ago. The AYSO recruited volunteer parents, mostly with little knowledge of soccer or coaching, provided them with a manual, a brief coaching clinic, a few balls and cones, and then cut them loose to coach their child’s soccer team. Many of these neophyte volunteers actually developed into relatively good soccer coaches after several years, in spite of knowing little initially or never having played the game themselves.

The naysayers will say that Judo is so special that only trained experts- read “black belts”- should teach clubs. I say that, yes, Judo is special, but not so special that we can’t develop a program to support coaches and provide them with the necessary tools to run good beginning programs in their neighborhoods.

Running an AYSO-like Judo program is not complicated. I know it is contrary to our mentality, but we need to encourage and empower non-black belts to teach Judo. We then need to provide them with an easy to follow and easy to practice curriculum (either Internet-based or in DVD format), a basic course on teaching methodologies, and a mentor to help solve issues and offer encouragement. Lastly, an Internet-based continuing education program will help these coaches grow into Judo and coaching. It might come to you as a shock, but this is how many high school sports programs are taught- some academic teacher with no coaching background in the sport gets volunteered to coach a team, and grows with the students.

I know that developing a Judo club from scratch is no piece of cake. I talk to enough Judo players to know that there is interest in setting up a new club, but once you factor in cost of mats and finding a facility you can afford to rent, it often becomes prohibitive to get started. To help with the financial burden, my solution is garage Judo. That’s right. Turn that area of the house where junk is stored into a Judo dojo. Garage Judo is a cost effective way to start a Judo club. I know that most people very seldom think about the garage as an option, but it is a great one until you can develop a decent membership to support renting a larger, commercial facility. Your typical two-car garage is large enough for a 6 x 6m mat. That’s eighteen tatami mats measuring a few inches short of 20 x 20 ft.

If you are used to larger surfaces, a 20' x 20' mat might seem too small to run a Judo program. I t isn’t. I had a garage program for eight years. My mat was a permanent spring-loaded one. Standing in the garage now, I can’t quite fathom how four adult couples did randori in it at the same time, but that’s what we did, safely and productively. Valerie Lafon Gotay (2x U.S. Olympian) and Todd Brehe (2x U.S. World Team) both cut their Judo teeth in my garage.

Jesse Jones, the former USJA President also ran a garage program for years before moving to a commercial location. Many of the Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu clubs in my area started with a few guys rolling around in someone’s garage. Once the sport and membership picked up steam, out went the garage and in came the commercial location. This sort of transition is still valid today for those just starting out.
To make Judo grow in the U.S. we need more coaches and more clubs. We can develop more coaches if we stop thinking they must be black belts before they can teach basic skills to beginners. Trying to find a location for a club in a community center or a YMCA that has a decent time slot and mats for a Judo class can be frustrating, and mostly a fruitless search, depending on the community you live in. By using your garage- or barn or room addition- you control every aspect of your club. Teach there permanently or use it as a stepping stone to a bigger facility. Above all, commit to teaching Judo somewhere!

It's just the way we do it in judo . . . .

. . . . The judge won't buy it!

There are certain things that we do in judo that put us in potential jeopardy should an accident occur and an injury result. Many times we see nothing wrong with our actions, for we have done it this way for a very long time. Yet, at times the most innocuous and traditional judo practices may lead to some serious liability issues.

Taking a look at just a few of these may be useful. First and foremost is the familiar diving-over-bodies ukemi. We have come to accept this as normal, when in fact it has little to do with real ukemi. I can already hear the uproar: "I have been doing it this way for forty years and nothing has happened.” You are very lucky! In a coaching course I ran several years ago, a well-known and high-ranking sensei on the East Coast related how he almost lost his dojo, his house, his car, etc. when a student was injured doing this kind of “diving ukemi.” Although the case was finally decided in his favor, it cost him $5,000. He no longer allows this kind of ukemi practice. There are other, more prudent ways to successfully teach ukemi.

Turning your back to your class while you focus on two students could easily be considered negligence. You need to ensure that you can see the entire mat area at all times if you are instructing alone. Jumping in to do randori with your students during a class you are running is also ill-advised, unless you have designated a competent and responsible person to watch the class while you do so.

These are only a few examples. As instructors, we need to look honestly and critically at our habits and determine if they are in fact useful and safe.

The Gentle Way of Life by Joe Vukson, Rokudan

My father introduced Judo to my middle brother and me in 1960. Back then Judo was something you read about only on the back of comic books.

Why was this Sport for me? I was short and regardless of my athletic ability it was a tall man’s world, or so I thought... My brother and I quickly excelled, size was not a handicap. Later in 1963 my youngest brother joined the Judoka ranks and for many years the 3 brothers dominated Pittsburgh and the Tri-State area. Every weekend we would load up the car and travel to another tournament. My dad bragged about his boys and my mother joyfully complained about dusting endless number of trophies. If he were still alive my dad would have been proud when we took our first National title, but not as proud as seeing his grandchildren and 4th generation great grandchildren as Judoka.

Not all Judoka want to be heavy competitors though. That’s what I love most about this sport: it has something for everyone; young and old, men and women, elite or causal player. You can be a great athlete in Randori, a technician at Kata, a casual player, a referee/judge, or a coach/sensei for future generations. My father wasn’t an elite player. He was just a Brown Belt, but he was our best coach ever. I can still remember his words: “Someone has to win and someone has to lose; do your best that’s all that counts”.

I saw the rise of Judo throughout the United States in the 60’s, 70’s and 80’s and also its gradual decline today. Why did Judo stop growing? In my opinion it’s pressure. There is too much pressure in every sport and everything we do today. You must win! There is pressure from the coaches, parents and our peers. Reward the winner and shun the loser; so the loser gives up and quits...

Not everyone can be a winner, not everyone has the ability or desire to be a winner. The casual Judoka is the heart of Judo. Who is the casual Judoka? She or he is the mother or father who wants to participate with their children. Maybe they want self-defense, exercise or just want to learn something different. The casual Judoka maybe be the kid who is impaired or not coordinated enough to make the team. As a Judoka each student may progress at their own speed. Judo does not discriminate against the mentally or physically challenged. Judo is all about self-confidence and self-discipline.

Judo can start growing again but it is up to us to make it grow. Show the same attention to the casual player as you do to the elite player. It is time we start giving back to the sport for the mutual welfare and benefit of all Judoka.
We had a visit to our Dojo this past week from a former rival and friend Gary Goltz. Back in the 60’s Gary was a long bushy hair kid and now he is the President of USJA. We talked about the old days and memories almost forgotten but always cherished. He said that our members reminded him of his own club back in California; a mixture of all levels and types of Judoka. This is the true heart of Judo. Gary talked about the USJA Grass Roots program and his vision of growing the USJA. It reminded me of my own Judo roots. What a refreshing change!

I was amazed at the response from our students. They could not believe that the President of USJA set aside time to visit their Dojo and show so much interest in all the Judoka. Needless to say we are on board with USJA!

Judo News From Around the Country

Montana, March 8

The Martial Arts Academy of Billings, Montana, a USJA club owned and operated by David and Eve Allen, Ed and Stacey Thompson and Kirt and Dru Wagner, hosted a clinic with Deborah Fergus of Southside Dojo in Portage, Michigan. There were three sessions: Junior Beginners, Intermediate Juniors, and Adults. Sensei Fergus had the students work on Ukemi, Uchikomi, Ne-Waza, Tachi-Waza and all enjoyed playing games designed to enhance and strengthen their Judo.
Ohio, February 26

USJA President Gary Goltz paid a visit to Top-10 USJA club Ameri-Kan Judo, in Findlay, Ohio. Head instructor Mark Hunter and his students enjoyed the workout. Gary went over some techniques with the group during Open Mats. Ameri-Kan Judo welcomes guests, so please visit if you are in Findlay!

Alberta, Canada March 7

Sensei Mark Healy of St. Albert Judo (www.stalbertjudo.com) welcomed Sensei Nick (Godan) and Jason Bruce (Nidan) from Goltz Judo in Claremont, CA to his dojo. He has a great club with an awesome mat. After a warm-up, newaza and uchi komi, Sensei Nick was asked to share some of his techniques: a modified Osoto Gari and Harai O Goshi, and a long Randori session followed. The students at St. Albert Judo were awesome and worked hard and welcomed us. Sensei Jason had a ton of air time and spent much of his training day on his back. If you ever get into the Edmonton Alberta Canada area, contact Sensei Mark at www.stalbertjudo.com to stop by and train at this excellent dojo.
New York, February 12

The Niagara Judo Yudanshakai in Upstate New York held a Nage-no-Kata Clinic and grading at Kin Tora Judo Club in Buffalo. The clinic was very well attended, with almost 30 people participating and four clubs represented. Kata instructors were Janet Ashida-Johnson, Eric Joseph, Heiko Rommelmann, Jr. and Jeff Giunta. Also attending the clinic was Mr. Ogasawara.

New York, March 6

On March 6th, 2011 Renshinkan Judo Club in Brockport, NY hosted a clinic with National Kata Champion Heiko Rommelmann, Jr. on Ukemi (breakfalls). The clinic was three hours, covered all aspects of breakfalls and some throwing techniques and included lunch with the clinic fee.

It was expected that this subject would attract and be geared more towards non-judo people and beginners, but there was much support from intermediate kyu grades and dan grades, too. Because of the turnout, Heiko not only taught ukemi, but also methods to teach ukemi. This approach allowed the beginners to learn fundamental skills while more advanced people were able to not only learn the important aspects of ukemi, but also ways to teach it effectively and safely.
California, March 5th

New Jersey, March 5-6

The two day clinics were a huge success! Bill and Joan did a fantastic job! The buzz from all attending was 100-percent positive.

Bill gave the coaches a lot to think about. He was very thorough, and peppered his lectures about vital topics such as goal-setting, lesson planning and liability issues with terrific stories personal stories about greats like Anton Geesink, Geoff Glee son and Jim Bregman. Participants like Parnell Legros of Starrett Judo contributed valuable insights to the discussion. Everyone left the clinic recharged and formulating new teaching methods to incorporate in their home clubs. The drill-training methods and transitions were a huge hit. As you can see, we had a packed house!
“Now let’s have one bull and one matador,” instructed Joan Love to a packed dojo at New Jersey’s Ridgewood Y. The students, from as far away as New Hampshire and Pennsylvania, watched intently as Joan demonstrated how to avoid ippon seoi nage by jumping around the attacker while guiding her lapel hand over her opponent’s head to the other side.

The mix of orange belts through high dan grade coaches returned to their partners to practice this unusual combination of attacking and dodging. Ironically, the beginners seemed to catch on the quickest. “Don’t worry,” Joan assured one coach who couldn’t seem to help himself from blocking with a grip fighting technique, “We’re asking you to undo a lot of what you’ve spent years doing; try to keep your arms very relaxed and move freely.”

Beginners, competitors, and high dan grade instructors traveled from as far away as New Hampshire and Pennsylvania to Ridgewood Judo for the Northeast’s first ever “Kelly’s Capers” clinics. Joan Love is one of only six certified “Kelly’s Capers” clinicians in the country.

“Kelly’s Capers” was developed by Sid Kelly, 8th Dan. The five-part system progressively prepares the judo beginner for randori through a series of playful jumps and small steps. The main goal of the system is to improve retention in the dojo. The beauty of this system is that beginners are engaged from the very first day of judo. They can "play the game" and experience a feeling of success. They learn the basic skills of randori: attacking, avoiding and countering so that when they are ready, they can join in randori with confidence.

In addition, the Kelly’s Capers system isn’t only for beginners; the movement skills it develops benefit intermediate and advanced judoka as well. One seasoned Masters competitor remarked that Kelly’s Capers is having him rethink his strategy. “Next time I go out on the mat,” he said with a wink, “they’re not going to know what hit them!”

I just wanted to give you a heads-up on the clinic information that has been implemented: last Tuesday, I introduced it and started to have class practice the new approach. Needless to say they loved it and there was great enthusiasm. The head coach was told (by some of the parents watching because he had to leave early) about the practice and how there was such an enthusiastic response, so now for the next month or so I will be teaching the classes and implementing the new approach. We have had 3 new people join the dojo and possible another this coming Thursday will join. Thanks again for the clinics! Jita Kyoei!

This year Budokan Judo Club expanded its Visit-Another-Dojo Month activities with mutual exchanges with two other clubs. On March 15th, we traveled to Beltsville, MD to visit Huio Judo Club under the instruction of Karl Tamai and Mark Smith. On March 21st, Huio visited our Club in Chesapeake Beach, MD. Huio Judo Club, a longtime friend to Budokan Judo Club, was founded by the late Sensei Ken Tamai in 1968.

On March 18th, Southern Maryland Jujitsu Academy (SMJA) brought 16 club members to visit our club. There were 33 on the mat. On March 24th Budokan Judo Club visited Southern Maryland Jujitsu Academy (USJA) under the instruction of Sensei Sean McBroom, Jujitsu Shichidan, in White Plains, MD.

Finally, we had a surprise visit from Sensei Edwin Takemori, Shichidan, a longtime friend of Budokan Judo Club visited on March 18th. Sensei Edwin presently instructs and coaches the United States Naval Academy Judo Team.
Summer Judo Camps!

Summer is a great time to spend a little extra time on your judo training. Whatever your schedule, location or age, there are some great judo camps to choose from. Here are three well-established programs that you may want to attend:

Thursday June 23 - Saturday, June 25, 2011: THE GREATEST CAMP ON EARTH
Next Level Center, 4317 Stevens Mill Road, Matthews, NC

Happy Birthday to The Greatest Camp On Earth! 2011 marks the 20th year of what has grown to be North America's largest martial arts training camp. Starting in Virginia in 1992, for about a decade The Greatest Camp has called Matthews, North Carolina home.

In a new venue for 2011, this year’s schedule is not yet complete, but in 2010 there were well over 300 Campers; about half were Juniors. This year there will be more than 20 scheduled instructors and several additional instructors; more than 120 scheduled training sessions and about a dozen randori sessions. About two out of three sessions will focus on various aspects of contest Judo. Other sessions will teach various kata: sambo, traditional jujutsu, Brazilian Jiu Jitsu, kendo, kenjutsu, cane-fighting, stick fighting, kappo, knife defenses, referee training, coach certification training, aikido, karate, kyudo (Japanese archery), yawara, police tactics, dealing with multiple attacks, conditioning methods and promotional examinations.

Instructors at The Greatest Camp every year include Olympians and national champions from various countries; coaches of national teams; and others of similar standing. This year US Olympian Ryan Reser and Nick Lowe (our most requested instructor) will be our featured Judo instructors; four-time World BJJ Champion Vitor “Shaolin” Ribeiro will be teaching Brazilian Jiu Jitsu; and world Masters champion Igor Yakimov, a perennial favorite with all of us, is returning to teach sambo for his seventh consecutive year.

The Greatest Camp welcomes campers from all regions of the United States, Europe, and other continents as well. A great many of our campers return year after year to continue training and to renew lifelong friendships. Newcomers are made welcome and almost always return to the "Greatest Camp!"

“Amp the Camp” is the theme for this summer’s 39th YMCA International Judo Camp. Newly named camp Co-Director Clyde Worthen, 6th Dan (Head instructor at Tech Judo, National Champion, National Collegiate Champion, Pan American Gold Medalist, 4-time US World Team Member) along with guest instructor Leonardo Victoria, 2nd dan, (Instructor at Tech Judo, 6X Colombian National Champion, World Team Member, Pan American Medalist, National and President’s Cup Silver Medalist) promise to “amp” all aspects of an already great traditional judo camp. Returning campers will enjoy the fine facilities and beautiful lakeside setting they have in the past, but everything else will be aimed at creating great judo instruction and workouts geared for specific age and ability levels and enhancing the non judo aspect of camp for juniors.

Judo Mat: The “new” mat area will be a combination of Zebra tatami and 2”Swain flexi-roll mats and cover over 5,400 sq. ft., including 6 competition areas. The mat area and set up is guaranteed to create an exciting judo atmosphere and be ideal for drills and group specific instruction. Kata practitioners will appreciate the 2” flexi rolls when taking falls on a daily basis.

Camp Activities: The judo staff is coordinating with the Y staff to allow junior campers to take full advantage of all the wonderful activities available such as rock wall climbing, swimming, horseback riding, fishing and boating, to name a few. For teenagers there will be a “Cool Zone” where they can socialize and be teenagers in the evening after judo.

Judo: We will have our many high-ranking instructors and staff returning to make sure campers have plenty of high quality instruction. Leonardo Victoria will bring his exciting style of “ippon” judo that makes him one of the most exciting national competitors to watch. Clyde Worthen will bring his years of experience and drills that have helped develop many fine judoka. Outstanding national kata champion Heiko Rommmelman has promised every young camper will leave camp this year taking great break falls and having a better understanding of the importance of kata.

The whole staff is “amped” and ready to make this the best year of judo camp ever! This year our camp is dedicated to co-founder George Harris who sadly passed earlier this year. We know he will be watching with a smile at what he sees.

The Judo Camp staff and the New York YMCA work to ensure that quality staff care for and work with your child. All instructors and counselors go through a rigorous selection process, background check and drug screening. The "Key Principles" of the YMCA focus "on what is important; the safety of your child, teaching them new skills, and helping them build new friendships."

A Brief History of Judo

By Hal Sharp, 8th Dan

In 1877 there was a seventeen year old scholarly Japanese student named Jigoro Kano who later founded Kodokan Judo. He majored in English and German, pitched for his school baseball team and enjoyed rowing and hiking. Because he was frail he was often bullied, and thus he studied jujutsu for protection. His body became stronger and he discovered the ability to defeat a stronger opponent by using the opponent's power, position and movement. In the 1800's jujutsu texts only consisted of scrolls with technique names and crude sketches. Students of jujutsu often had to take a blood oath of secrecy.

In 1882 at the age of 22 Kano started a new school of jujutsu named Kodokan Judo (a place to study the way of judo). Jujutsu contained many self defense techniques that were dangerous to practice in competition. Therefore Kano divided Judo into two areas of study, sport and self-defense. By prohibiting dangerous techniques, Judo could be practiced as a sport using free practice (randori) and tournaments (shiai). The sport of judo included throwing, holding, choking and arm locks. Safe practice was essential; therefore uniforms (judo gi) were worn to safely throw and control the opponent. The self defense aspect of judo was practiced with prearranged drills (kata). There are kata for the technical demonstration of judo techniques and principles.

The original Kodokan had a mat area of 12 by 18 feet and 10 to 20 students. Competitions, often between judo and jujutsu players were brutal, with no time limit and very few rules.

In the 1900's, Judo grew in Japan because it was practiced in most high schools, colleges, and police institutions. This was a young man's sport that created power judo and wrestler type physiques. At that time there were few competing sports so judo players (judoka) usually practiced many hours every day. During that period about 1200 schools specialized in mat work (Kosen Judo), which became the basis for Brazilian Jujitsu. In Japan over 99 percent of Kodokan Judo competitions were based on full-point (ippon) wins generally fought in a line-up in which one kept fighting until he lost or had a draw. Championship (elimination) contests were few with wins often based on a decision, not ippon. These contests were refereed by high ranking teachers (Sensei).

Jigoro Kano became Japan's Minister of Education and Olympic Representative. Judo spread throughout the world as a result of visiting Japanese judo teachers and foreigners who trained in Japan. Kano was pleased with the spread of judo, but disappointed by the use of power judo and lack of self-defense practice which emphasized the use of the opponent's power and movement. Unfortunately Kano died in 1938 before he could change the trend. After World War II Judo grew into a significant sport and by 1964 became an Olympic Sport. The International Judo Federation (IJF) created new judo contest rules making championship (elimination) judo contests more popular than ippon judo contests. To develop judo, European countries emphasized the technical and cultural aspect of judo thereby making it a major sport in their countries. France, with a population of 65 million, has over 600,000 judo members and is second in winning Olympic and World Gold Medals. The United Kingdom, with a population of 62 million, has 65,000 members. The United States, with a population of 312 million, has approximately 20,000 judo members and very few medals. The detriment to the growth of judo in this country may be caused by an over emphasis on competitive judo. France and the UK emphasize development of black belts and teachers before competitors. In these countries judo is for everyone, not for a few athletes. For over 50 years, the US judo membership has been stagnant. Recently, USA Judo, USJA and USJF have agreed that the competitive model does not work well. They now want recreational and technical judo and self defense.
